

Social and Personal

Mrs. and Mrs. Herbert Tiffany, of Baltimore, arrived in Richmond yesterday to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Eppa Hunton, Jr., at their home on West Franklin Street. Mrs. Tiffany was formerly Miss Foulton, and is one of the most beautiful women in Baltimore society. She is one of the best whist players in that city, and plays in most of the prominent card tournaments of interest. Mr. and Mrs. Tiffany are frequent visitors to Richmond, and a great deal of handsome entertaining is always done in their honor. They will remain in Richmond for about two weeks.

Peyton-Taylor. In the presence of the immediate members of the families and a very few friends, the wedding of Miss Sophia Plater (Taylor, of Chattertown, Va.), and Dr. Harry A. Peyton, of Washington, took place in St. John's Church at 4 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William Taylor Snyder. After a short visit to New York, Dr. and Mrs. Peyton will be at the Imperial in Washington until sailing for Panama, where Dr. Peyton goes as a physician in the hospital service on the Canal Zone.

Both the bride and groom belong to prominent and distinguished Virginia families, and their wedding, though celebrated very quietly, is of much importance to society here, where they both have relatives.

Entertained in Petersburg. Miss Katharine Cary, who has been the guest of Miss Helen Townes at her home in Petersburg, has returned to Richmond. Miss Cary was among the guests present at a very attractive affair given by her hostess last Friday evening. The use was decorated in big bowls of white flowers, and each guest was presented with a fan as a souvenir. Miss Sarah Seaton won the first prize, and the consolation was drawn by Miss Rebecca McIlwaine. Miss Spooner Dunn was awarded the booby prize.

Mrs. Strother Complimented. Says the Roanoke Evening World of Tuesday:

who comes as a delegate to the Federation of Clubs this week, is one of the most distinguished guests of the convention. She is a magnificent eloquent, a woman of charming personality and is prominent in club circles. Mrs. Strother will be the guest of Mrs. George Ellis on South Roanoke Street.

The delegates have been entertained very handsomely during their stay in Roanoke, a reception being given Tuesday evening at the Hotel Roanoke. Mrs. B. B. Montague of this city, was in the receiving line, and later in the week will address the convention. At the Art Club.

Following the regular quarterly meeting of the board of directors of the Art Club of Richmond at the club headquarters, Grace and Belvidere streets, on Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Jeffrey Montague gave an interesting and valuable talk on her experiences while studying in New York and Munich, which were by turns pathetic and humorous.

Noting the many differences in methods and systems between this country and the Old World, as well as the totally different status held by the artist there, Mrs. Montague was especially felicitous in depicting the life led by the American artist in Munich. Her methods of instruction were commented on freely and with a knowledge of the exact situation, and the opinion was expressed that for the beginner there can be no place in the world to compare with Munich. The speaker presented a series of water pictures with a vim and go which fairly carried her large audience with her. It was a surprise to many of her hearers to learn that Paris is far less valuable for the beginner than the Bavarian city.

Mrs. Montague manifested an ability to see the ludicrous side of many things which would strike the average observer as lacking any of the elements of humor. Possessed of a genial spirit, she found friends wherever her easel was set up, and made the most of every situation, however unusual or unexpected.

Much interest is being manifested in the Art Club and the membership is steadily on the increase, at the present time numbering some 175. A junior membership has been authorized, whereby many of the younger students can acquire membership, which has hitherto been denied them.

Many improvements are in contemplation in the facilities of the club house, and the prospects for the future are very bright.

Recital To-Night. The organ, violin and song recital, which takes place this evening in St. Paul's Church at 8:15 o'clock, will be a big event in musical circles of the city. The program arranged for this evening's entertainment is unusually good, and some of the most prominent musicians in Richmond will take part. They will be Professor Jacob Reinhardt, Douglas Gordon, Mr. Potter, Miss Gellie MacDonald, Miss Marie Maria Adams, Miss Annie Louise Reinhardt, Mrs. William Reinhardt and Mr. Cosby.

Prominent Engagement. An engagement of much interest to society, which was recently announced, is that of Mrs. Horatio W. Garrett to Commander Carlton Wilford Bellairs, who was retired in 1902 from the English navy and is now a member of Parliament. Mrs. Garrett, whose husband has been dead for about fifteen years, was formerly Miss Charlotte L. Pierson, of Summit, N. J., a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Pierson, of Lawrence, L. I. Mrs. Garrett is now on her way home from Europe, where she spent much of her time, and is expected in Baltimore the end of this week. No date for the wedding has been set, but friends of Mrs. Garrett believe it will be in the autumn. Mrs. Garrett's husband was a brother of Robert Garrett, of Baltimore, and John W. Garrett, American minister to Venezuela. Commander Bellairs has represented Kings Lynn in Parliament since 1906, and lives in London at 1 Morphet Terrace, Southwest. He was born in 1871, a son of Lieutenant Sir William Bellairs. He entered the royal navy in 1884, and was retired as a commander in 1902. He is vice-chairman of the Navy League and Parliamentary Naval Committee, of which he was the founder. Commander Bellairs is a member of the Savile, one of the most famous of London clubs.

Miss Mitchell's Recital. In the home of Ernest L. Bolling, 1017 Floyd Avenue, at 8:30 o'clock, tomorrow evening, Miss Roberta Mitchell will give a pupil's recital.

Miss Mitchell, who has been studying music under Mr. Bolling's instruction for some time, is a brilliant pianist. Her friends and a few friends of Mr. and Mrs. Bolling will be among her audience, and her program will embrace selections from Bach, Beethoven, Schubert, Von Weber, Schumann, Brahms, Chopin and Liszt.

Attractive Dance. The Mutual Social Club, Thursday Night Club and friends of both clubs were entertained at a most enjoyable dance Tuesday evening at Liberty Hall, the Mutual Social Club being the host. Supper was served at midnight.

Among those dancing were Miss Gladys Higginson, Miss Wilkinson, Grace Ellington, Madeline Dominica, Mary Kacke, Lena Alto, Gertrude Woodworth, Bertha Tisdale, Verna Baker, Bertha, Alma Francis, Grace Parater, Genevieve Williams, Marie Parater, Mary Jones, Beatrice Jarvis, Marie O'Donnell, Naez Buchanan, Regina Buchanan, Louise Day, Matilda Day, Marie Daly, Teresa Donahue, Margaret Williams, Bernice Buchanan, Phyllis Jarvis, Louis Day, Charlie Day, Louis Genevieve, John Bolen, Alice Smith, T. Hensley, Willie Gray, Henry O'Grady, Wilbur Franck, Charles O'Donnell, C. L. Price, Michaux Carlton, Harry Hinchman, Julius Gerring, Clarence Buchanan, Leo Buchanan, Joe Roehling, Ed. Blake, Doroughty Hinchman, Cabel Davis, Ed. Roberts, John Fletcher, Volle Harwood, Robert Brown, G. M. Tinsley, Willie Johnson, Temple Maynard, Percy Carter, Albert Siewers, Milton Vrenn, Kenneth Goode, Maurice Daly, of Washington, and others. The chaperons were Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Parter and Mr. and Mrs. M. J. O'Donnell.

Home Wedding. The home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fletcher Rennie, in Highland Park, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Tuesday evening at half-past 6 o'clock, when their daughter, Miss Ella Rennie, became the bride of John Wilson Rowe, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Rowe, of Banner Elk, N. C. Palm fronds and shaded lights decorated the parlors. Rev. Joseph Rennie, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Norfolk, performed the ceremony. Mrs. Austin W. Martenstein presided at the piano, and played the wedding march from "Lohengrin" as a processional, and "O, Beloved Me" during the ceremony.

The bride wore a lovely gown of soft white satin, with a long tulle veil, and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and white sweetpeas. Miss Carrie C. Rennie was her sister's maid of honor. She wore a white lingerie frock over green satin, and carried a shower of American Beauty roses. The bridesmaids wore a gown of lavender voile, and carried a bouquet of lavender sweetpeas. T. Walton Clapp, of Abingdon, was best man, and Storrs Warinner and Frank F. Rennie, Jr., acted as ushers.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Rowe left for Washington, and on May 15 will be at home in Sutton, W. Va. Guests from a distance were Mrs. Bettie Curtis Ambler, of Williamsburg; Dr. Joseph Rennie, of Norfolk; Dr. and Mrs. J. Gordon Rennie, of Petersburg; and W. J. Tebbles, of Ashland, Ky. In and Out of Town. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fairfax, of "Oak Hill," are spending some time in this city with relatives. Mrs. Edward R. Baird has returned to Norfolk, after visiting her mother, Mrs. Jacob Michaux, in this city. Mrs. Greenhow Maury, who has been the guest of friends here, has returned to her home in Danville. Eppa Hunton, Jr., has returned to the city, after a brief stay in Washington, D. C. Miss Nannie Kennett, who has been visiting friends in this city, has returned to her home in Norfolk. Rev. G. H. Lambeth has returned to Danville, after spending several days in Richmond. Miss Elaine Powell, of Washington,

Every Man Read This

This treatment is said to have acquired a wonderful reputation throughout the East, owing to its peculiar propensity to fortify the nerve force and generate health and a consequent personal magnetism so essential to the happiness of every normal human being. It is claimed to be a blessing to those who are physically impaired, gloomy, dependent, nervous, and who have trembling of the limbs, dizziness, heart palpitation, cold hands and feet, insomnia, fear without cause, inability to act rationally as others do, and in which the vast benefit writers, professional men, office workers and the victims of society's late hours and over-indulgence in wine, liquor, etc.

By preparing the treatment at home secretly, no one need know of another's trouble, while the ingredients are much used in filling various prescriptions, so that even the purchase of them separately need occasion no timidity.

If the reader decides to try it, get three ounces of ordinary syrup of Marshmallow, one ounce compound fluid balm; mix and let stand two hours. Then add one ounce compound essence cardiol and one ounce unctura cadomene compound (not cardamon); mix all together in a glass bottle, shake a teaspoonful after each meal and one at night.

This contains no opiates whatever, and is safe to be used by women who suffer with their nerves with absolute certainty of prompt and lasting benefits.

PERSONAL VIEWS OF DR. MOREHEAD

Roanoke College President Writes of Elson's History Incident.

VITAL PRINCIPLES INVOLVED

Hasty Judgments Formed on Basis of Ex-Parte Statements.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

Roanoke, Va., May 10.—Dr. John Alfred Morehead, president of Roanoke College, gave out the following statement here to-day regarding the significance of the Elson's history incident at that institution:

"Having returned to Roanoke College after an absence of nearly two months, I have given my first leisure to the study of the agitation against Roanoke College in connection with the former use of Elson's History of the United States. While the trustees of the college issued a comprehensive statement on March 7, and while later the faculty made a statement of our position, it seems evident that there is still misapprehension as to the real attitude of this institution. For this reason, and also because of the wide-spread feeling that the 'history incident' may have its relation to the principles involved in their relation to educational work.

"The trustees passed resolutions expressing loyalty to the South, deprecating sectional agitation, and calling for full and free investigation in search for the truth. They stated clearly the principle that a professor should have freedom to select his own text-books and to determine the basis of his question. The test of the satisfactoriness of a professor was, in their view, not his text-books, but the actual work of his department in its real substance and results. Disapproved was the feeling of certain passages of the book in question, but the professor of history was sustained. At his suggestion, Elson's text was discontinued. This was done, not because there was any danger of errors about the South being taught, as the book was in the hands of a competent and impartial professor, but out of deference to the feelings aroused in the minds of Confederate veterans, and in the interest of harmony. The resolutions of the trustees were adopted with only two dissenting votes. Among the affirmative voters were prominent Confederate veterans, including a gentleman who was in Pickett's charge at Gettysburg. Elson's book has not been used at Roanoke College by the professor in a text or for reference since March 7. The faculty is in perfect accord with the action of the trustees. One student was taken out of college on account of the controversy, but five have been added to the enrollment since the March meeting. So much for the facts of the situation at Roanoke College.

Vital Principles Involved. "It seems to us that vital principles are involved in this controversy. It is not clear that a college must honestly stand for the truth, if it is to be an ethical, as well as an intellectual force in the development of its students? The students must feel that the college in its professors is sincerely devoted to the truth in all departments, and at any cost, thus only will they have respect for their instructors, and will themselves learn the vital lesson of intellectual honesty. The ideal of a college, as of the scholar, must be honest investigation and sincere instruction, if there is to be real scholarship and real college work.

"There cannot be loyalty to the truth in scholarly work without freedom to investigate, to think, to review all phases of a subject—the truths, the half-truths, and the untruths about it—and to form and to express independent judgments. This is the principle of academic freedom. It goes without saying that it needs to be carefully guarded in its application. But it is a vital principle. A man worthy to be a college professor should not only be allowed freedom, but his exercise of it in scholarly endeavor and method should be required. It seems to me that the general tendency in educational work in all grades is to emphasize the teacher rather than the mere text-book or the text-book method of teaching. Especially in college or university work, the determining emphasis is placed upon the professor as the authority, not upon his means of work. He is a specialist, an expert, who justifies himself by his work and by its results. As an illustration of the maintenance of the principle of academic freedom, I may cite what occurred some years ago at Yale University. The professor of economics was an aggressive antagonist of the theory of protection and an advocate of free trade. It is perfectly apparent that he was not in harmony with his environment. But he was retained as a matter of principle, although the result was that he taught the sons of protectionists the contrary doctrine. In the present case, Roanoke College was more fortunate. When the matter first came up in the autumn, I took occasion to assure myself that, following freely his own convictions, Dr. Thorstensen, of our department of history, would teach no errors against the South, whatever text-book he used. Surely personal facts may be of interest. Dr. Thorstensen is the son of Swedish parents, who came to this country after the Civil War was over. He is an alumnus of Bethany College, Kansas. He won the A. B., A. M. and Ph. D. degrees at Yale University. All of his special preparation has been in the subjects of history and social science. He accepted his present position at Roanoke College in the summer of 1907, coming here from the University of Oklahoma. We know him to be an impartial scholar. This is the vital point.

Guide to True Conclusions. "It should also be remembered that the student, at the college age, has an inquiring, independent mind. He wants to know this and understand that. The wise professor will not indulge in concealments. He will review impartially all the facts, the alleged facts, and the misrepresentations. His aim will be by comprehensive study to guide the student to just and true conclusions. But he will not only endeavor to add to the student's sum of knowledge and to improve his mental discipline, but he will also familiarize him with wise methods of scientific investigation.

"Having in mind the actual principles, methods and practices of college work, it seems puerile to justify a professor and suspect a college of the ground of a few objectionable passages or opinions in a text-book of possible to account for the continued agitation of this matter only by assuming that hasty judgments have been formed on the basis of ex parte statements.

"It is a significant fact that a Confederate veteran, who was a chaplain in the army, without any connection with me whatever, proposed the joining of our members to the March meeting of the trustees.

"In regard to text-books and their use in the recitation room, it is not necessary or even desirable that every teacher and the text-books should in every case be in full accord. The excellencies of a text-book may so far exceed its defects that its use in the recitation room, leaving corrections to be made by the instructor.

Marvel of History. "Shall Southern institutions make an exception of American history in their application of the above principles to the work of higher education? Is there such a position to be untenable? For my part, I am thoroughly in sympathy with true Southern ideal and traditions. It is my conviction that the South will be among the civilizations of the world, and that things human, it had its defects, but its excellencies were so fine, so appealing, despite the drag of slavery, the civilization of the old South will always remain one of the marvels of American history.

"The case of the South is not so weak that it needs to fear the full light of scientific investigation. Let the final verdict of history stand while the Southern, whose patriotism is based on convictions, will thus invite the best and fairest estimate of the South's past, without solicitude for the result, knowing that the honest scholar will do justice to its heroes and its achievements, is there not also a broader patriotism that should be inculcated in our educational work? I am reminded here of the words of General Lee to a Virginia man who shortly after the war, he said: 'Abandon all local animosities and make your sons Americans.' I heard similar sentiments expressed, while living in Richmond a good many years ago, by the late General John B. Gordon. In his eloquent address to the camp of the United Confederate Veterans, convening in that city, will the South forget these words from the body? I do profoundly believe that the educational program, in a patriotic sense, North, South, East and West, is expressed once for all for us in the noble words of General Robert E. Lee.

"This agitation in connection with the history controversy has seemed to me particularly untimely. The men of the South are winning place and recognition in the councils of the nation. There are numerous indications in very recent years that the North is to be just to the South, both as to its history and as to its opportunity for service in the cause of our republic. I feel sure that the South, on the whole, is ready to receive the North in the same generous spirit.

"In southwestern Virginia, as in many other parts of the South, we have a mixed population. People from various parts of our great country are uniting with us in the earnest endeavor to develop this section along all lines. Under the circumstances they might well consider such sectional agitation ungracious, were it not that some of our people, as I verily believe, have been misled and have temporarily misrepresented themselves. But there have been many sober heads, even in our immediate vicinity, during this temporary excitement.

"It seems to me that the one course to pursue, to repeat the words of General Lee, is clear: 'Abandon all these local animosities and make your sons Americans.' So shall we work together, each in his place, for the welfare of our common country.

"JOHN A. MOREHEAD."

Strike Protest AGAINST COURT

Cigarmakers Demand Pardon or New Trial for Convicted Leaders.

Tampa, Fla., May 10.—Singing the "Marseillaise," 3,000 cigarmakers marched through the streets of West Tampa and Ybor City this afternoon in a demonstration against the decision of Judge Wall, of the Circuit Court, upholding the sentencing to one year's imprisonment of leaders in the recent strike here rendered by the Criminal Court of Record.

Following the parade a general strike was declared. Further than the gathering of crowds of excited workers on street corners there was no serious disturbance.

To-night Judge Wall issued a mandate to the sheriff to notify the leaders in the movement that unless the demonstration came to an end before morning the leaders under sentence, Jose de la Cana, Brito Russell and J. P. Bartlum, would be remanded to jail and sent to the chain gang at once to begin serving their terms.

When rumors were received in the business section of Tampa that the cigarmakers had struck and were rioting, police were hurried to the Labor Temple in Ybor City to preserve order. When the factories closed the crowd was augmented by thousands who did not walk out, and to-night the streets of Ybor City and West Tampa are filled with more exulting Latin discussing the situation.

In a manifesto issued this afternoon the joint advisory board stated that the strike would continue until the men under sentence are either pardoned or a new trial is granted. About twenty-five per cent of the cigarmakers have joined the strike. A meeting of the General Trades and Labor Assembly is in session to-night, discussing the advisability of a sympathetic strike of all the trade bodies of the city.
